About NSLM

The National Sporting Library & Museum (NSLM) is dedicated to the preservation and promotion of the culture of field sports, angling, and equestrian pursuits. This mission has served to guide the NSLM since its foundation in 1954 by George L. Ohrstrom, Sr., George L. Ohrstrom, Jr., and Alexander Mackay-Smith. A research Library and fine art Museum, the NSLM sits on an idyllic campus in Middleburg, Virginia. From this lovely spot in the heart of Virginia's hunt country, NSLM brings the tradition of turf and field sports to its members and visitors via compelling programs and educational exhibits. The mission of the NSLM is supported through our members who enjoy a rich program of benefits, in addition to keeping the history and culture of sporting pursuits alive for future generations.

- Permanent art collection includes artwork by Herbert Haseltine, Edward Troye, Sir Alfred Munnings, and many others
- Over 5,000 rare books span 500 years of sporting history, housed in the F. Ambrose Clark Rare Book Room
- Exhibitions in Museum and Library's Forrest E. Mars, Sr. Exhibit Hall draw thousands every year
- Archival collections house material from significant sporting figures and organizations
- Library houses 20,000 volumes on equestrianism, angling, fowling, and much more
